

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

AES AWARDED ANOTHER NEW PATENT

Long Beach, CA, December 12, 2012 - AES, a leading provider of advanced interactive software solutions for banking transactions, announced today that it has been issued a patent from the Companies and Intellectual Property Registry Office in South Africa.

South Africa Patent number 2007/01365 titled "System and Method for Resolving Transactions", uses a rules-based decision engine to process a user's financial status and then present a set of offers customized for that user. This patent is important because South Africa has the largest economy on the African continent and is a future opportunity for the company.

"This newly issued South African patent is important to the continued growth of our intellectual portfolio", stated Joseph Konowiecki, Chief Executive Officer of Apollo Enterprise Solutions, Ltd. He continued, "At AES, we are always in tune with new ways to remain a top technology provider to the banking industry."

About AES

Apollo Enterprise Solutions, Ltd., with offices in Los Angeles, New York, London, Sydney, and Lugano is home of the patented TRUE™ system, the first total self-service account management system for banks and other financial enterprises. This system broadens the scope of existing online banking systems by enabling consumers to obtain more complex banking and other financial services on a convenient self-serve basis. The TRUE™ system increases collections and recoveries; reduces charge-offs; rapidly activates business rule and other change management initiatives; enhances the customer experience; and reduces operating costs, account attrition rates and roll rates. The TRUE™ system's modules are highly secure, hosted Software-as-a-Service and Private Cloud applications that integrate into IBM, Oracle, Microsoft and other operating environments, and into a wide range of collections systems of record.
